

Home Gardener's Weekly

If you're new here after the Joyful Gardener event, we're so glad you're here. You've joined a community of gardeners who are learning, experimenting, and growing alongside one another through every season.

This week in the Home Gardener's Weekly, we're sharing a few ways you can connect, learn, and keep your garden momentum going.

Grow Better Together

Gardening is something many of us begin on our own — but it becomes easier, more encouraging, and more fun when we grow alongside others.

At Grow Your Own Vegetables, community has always been part of how we learn: sharing progress, asking questions, and seeing what's possible in different gardens and climates.

That's why we're expanding the ways you can connect and grow with us below. We're creating more ways for you to learn and grow alongside other gardeners this season through helpful videos and a supportive online community.

Community Watch Party This Friday

This Friday at 1pm PT inside our Grow Your Own Vegetables community, we're airing a special class together:

Healthier Together: Community Gardens That Thrive with Ocean Robbins & Yeun Byun

Take a behind-the-scenes tour of Ocean Robbins' community garden with grower Yeun Byun as they share how they choose plants and keep their garden systems easy, regenerative, and productive.

If you enjoy learning alongside other gardeners, you're warmly invited to join us.

Indoor Seed Starting Made Simple

Right now, many gardeners are beginning seeds indoors — one of the most hopeful ways to start a new season.

you're newer to gardening, it's also perfectly fine to begin with seedlings or plant starts from a nursery. Starting seeds indoors is simply another way to begin — and one many gardeners grow into over time.

Garden Tip

If seedlings begin leaning toward light, it's simply a signal they need more intensity or closer light placement — not a problem. Adjusting early helps them grow sturdily from the start.

Happening Next Week

From Seed to Community with Greg Peterson March 4th at 4pm PT / 7pm ET

In this masterclass, discover how seeds form the foundation of a resilient, abundant garden — and how simple seed saving can strengthen both your harvest and your local food community. Learn how to choose the right varieties, encourage natural reseeding, and grow food that becomes more productive, flavorful, and self-sustaining year after year.

Continue Growing Together → Harvest Club

If you enjoyed learning alongside thousands of gardeners during Joyful Gardener, Harvest Club is where that shared learning continues all year long.

Inside, you'll find:

 Plant Growing Guides – Detailed PDF guides for vegetables, herbs, fruits, and even garden dwellers. Each guide walks you through planting, nurturing, and harvesting ... plus recipes, fun facts, and sometimes companion videos to help you succeed.

 Garden Dwellers Library – Learn which visitors are beneficial, which are crop competitors, and how to manage your garden ecosystem for healthy, balanced growth.

 Live Garden Jam Q&As – Ongoing learning and real-time support from our gardening community.

To welcome new members from Joyful Gardener, we're offering 25% off Harvest Club for a limited time — a simple way to continue learning together beyond the event.
